HUEERT COWAN.

Hubert Cowan, youngest son of Dr. and Mrs. G. H. Cowan, passed away on Wednesday night after an illness of some weeks of pneumonia. He was but twelve years of age, and a popular boy among his playmates.

LOUISE CAMPBELL.

Louise Campbell, widow of the late Alexander McDonald, passed away very suddenly on Saturday evening last. Mrs. McDonald had been suffer-ing from heart trouble for some months past, but until a few days before her sudden death had not been considered seriously ill. Her husband considered seriously ill. Her husband the late Rev. Alexander McDonald passed away quite suddenly last fall. But one child, Mrs. A. E. Webb, at present living in California, survives. The funeral will take place this (Friday) afternoon from her late residence. The remains will be taken to Duntroon, Ont., for interment beside the remains of her late husband.

H. BIDWELL CONWAY.

H. Bidwell Conway, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Conway, died in the Mowat Memorial Hospital, Kingston, on Sunday morning. Deceased was one of Napanee's most popular young men and his death, when just entering on a useful career, is deplored by his many friends. Last summer he finished his education at the Collegiate Institute secured a position in Water-Institute secured a position in water-town and was doing well, when he contracted a cold which he found impossible to shake off, though he continued at work until after Christ-when he returned home. Tubermas when he returned home. Tuber-culosis rapidly developed and he went to the Kingston institution for treatment, but nothing could be done to save his life. The remains were brought to Napanee on Monday and afternoon from his parents' residence. Services were held in St. Andrew's Church and interment in Riverview Cemetery. The members of the I. O. For forty years she was a faithfuland concientious teacher, gifted with theart of imparting knowledge, a good disciplinarian, yet kind and sympathetic as is evidenced by the es-teem in which she was held by all classes in the community. She entered upon the duties of the profession, for which she was so well qualified, in 1869, at a time when the schools of Napanee were just beginning to take their place among the best in the province; and that they have been able to maintain that place is largely due to the excellent work of Miss Walsh and her companions in her life-work, Misses Fraser, Ballantyne, Aylesworth and Mair. Rain or shine, fair weather or foul, the familiar figure of Miss Walsh was to be seen regularly and punctually going to and from her daily task and she never faltered in her duty until stricken down by disease. For the past four years she has been a patient sufferer and her greatest regret was that she could no longer serve the little ones she loved so tenderly and amidst all the varying changes of life her heart was in the school-room until her death on Saturday last. The funeral service was conducted in St. Patrick's church on Tuesday morning by Rev. Father O'Connor. A devoted brother and sister, Mr. John F. Walsh and Mary E. Walsh survive the deceased and have the sympathy of a host of friends in this dark hour of their affliction. the news of her death many men and women, boys and girls of Napanee's homes bowed their heads in reverence and gave inward expression to the feeling worbs "Our Teacher" which appeared upon one of the beautiful floral wreaths upon the casket.

Else wherefore born ?" In the passing to his Maker on Friday last, the death of Edward McGuire has made an almost irreparable loss to has made an almost irreparable loss to his relatives and the Township of Sheffield, His parents came from Ireland in 1842 and first settled near Kingston (Waterloo) where next year Edward was born. Later the family moved to Clark's Mills, and subsequently to the north of the Township of Sheffield where they permanently settled in what is now termed the McGuire neighborhood. In 1867 Edward married Elizabeth Ann Mc-Knight, and was blessed with ten children, five of whom together with his wife pre-deceased him, Mrs. Mc-Guire dying in 1892. The survivors are Mamie, now Mrs, Adam Kennedy, Wm. Jas., Edward, Samuel, and Reaby Serson. Edward died, deeply lamented, because all through his life he manifested that christian character and conduct that made him beloved in the family, and neighborhood. Having the confidence of all he exercised his influence for good always. He was a staunch member of Christ Church, Tamworth, and was ever ready with word and purse to support God's work. He never failed, and such was his sympathetic foresight for the success of the parish activities that he has directed his subscriptions to be continued for a considerable time after his death. Many a poor person in the township received his timely help; and his advice and gentle influence encouraged for good thinking and living Indeed he was one of God's living. EGG DEALERS PLAN RADICAL CHANGE

Would Abolish "Case Count" and buy on Easis of Quality.

SUGGEST LEGISLATION

Eggs Mark Act to Make Selling and Trading in Rotten Eggs Illegal-To Form Association.

That the system known as the "case count' which has prevailed in the egg trade for a number of years provides no discrimination whatever, and that under it the producer, with no re-flection on the hen, is not encouraged to market an article of high quality, was the decision come to yesterday afternoon in the rooms of the Board afternoon in the rooms of the Board of Trade at a largely attended meeting of the egg trade of the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. The remedy for this state of affairs was suggested as taking the form of an Eggs Mark Act, similar to the act governing fruit. The formation of a new produce association was also proposed. association was also proposed.

Determining means whereby consumers and merchants could be protected against the marketing of stale and rotten eggs was the primary object of the meeting. Under the present system when bad eggs are found in the case there is no recourse for the sentsystem when bad eggs are found in the case there is no recourse for the dealer to take, and the opinion, of the meeting was that the "case count"—where a flat rate is quoted, stale and bad eggs commanding just as high a price as those of the highest grade—is equivalent to placing a premium on equivalent to placing a premium on careless and dilatory methods in the production and care of this product. Moreover, it was pointed out that the country storekeepers received no encouragement to market an article of high quality.

The opinion was unanimous that legislation should be secured to prevent the sale of such products and full approval was given to the proposal to adopt a new system whereby due dis-crimination should be made between good and bad eggs. The following resolutions were unanimously adopt-

Resolved. "That it is the consensus of opinion of those assembled in this meeting that the greatest need of the Canadian egg Trade at the present time is the passage by the Federal Parliament of an Egg Marks Act, similiar the Fruit Marks Act; such act to make unlawful the buying, selling or trading in rotten eggs and to include

Their proposal was followed by continued and animated discussion, but through it was clear that the majority of the meeting was heartily in sympathy with this or any other measure that would enable the producers and handlers of this product to curtail, or if possible, entirely eliminate, the enormous and needless loss due to the marketing of bad and deteriorated eggs.

It was further pointed out by certain members present that it would certainly be unwise not to take advantage of the experience gained by a number of the States, notably Kansas and Michigan. What was proposed at the meeting had already been worked out in a practical way in these States with in a practical way in these states with the result of very greatly conserving this valuable product by eliminating needless loss and thus making the poultry enterprises more remunerative for the producer and the price of the product cheaper and its quality more dependable for the customer.

TORONTO, April 15 .- The worst tie-up of traffic that has yet occurred in the Ontario portion of the C.P.R. main line took place at 4.30 p.m. yesterday, when a large C.P.R. freight yesterday, when a large C.F.R. treight train traveling at a fast rate of speed left the rails three miles north of Bolton Junction. For several hours the line was blocked by more than twenty piled-up freight cars.

The cause of the wreck is not known, but the statement was made by Supt. Arundel of the C.P.R. last night that it was believed to be due to a brake-beam falling from the front portion of the train on to the rails. Twenty-two cars following were thrown to each side of the rails and into one telescoped mass. By a strange chance the last eight cars composing the train was loaded down with humber and the convection cause. with lumber, and the congestion caused by the smash was tremendous.

The Pope's Doctors Report Favorable Progress.

ROME, April 15 .- The bulletin issued last night by Prof. Marchiafava and Dr. Amici regarding the Pope's condition read as follows:

"His Holiness passed the day with-out fever. His temperature to-night is nearly 99. Amelioration in the bronchal symptoms continues.
(Signed) "Marchiafava,
"Amici."

The report that the two doctors are not in accord is without foundation. Both take precisely the same view of the case, and persist in the belief that if the conditions remain favorable the Pope will yet weather the storm.

The principal difficulty is to keep the patient in complete repose. No sooner does he feel a little better than he insists on being informed of the progress of the constantine jubilee celebrations, bitterly lamenting his inability to receive the many parties of pilgrims now in Rome.

A great drawback is the sudden return of winter weather, with heavy rain, bitter wind and temperature lower than ever before was known in Rome during April.

A rise in the Pope's temperature, which began in the early part of Monday afternoon, again gave rise to exaggerated rumors. On the stock exchange it was actually reported that the Pope was dead. There was a rush of telephone calls on the officers of the commissioner of police in the Borge Santo Spirito, adjoining the Vatican, but within an hour the rumor had been completely set at rest. The Pope's sisters continue to be constant visitors, crossing on foot backward and forward between their little flat on Piazzi Rusticucci and the bronze doors of the Vatican. Their privacy is respected by the newspaper men, but stragglers anxiously scan their expression as they quit the Vati-

New York Dedicated Memerial to the Titanic Victims.

NEW YORK, April 15 .- "Titanio Day," the anniversary of the sinking of the mammoth new steamship Titanic by collision with an iceberg, carrying down with her 1,500 persons, is being observed with the dedication of still another memorial to the dead. The memorial is a lighthouse tower and a time-ball in the new Seamen's Institute located near the battery. The building is equipped to care for 50,000 of the half-million seamen who come to New York every year.
To-day is also the last day on which claims against the Oceanic Steamship Co., owners of the ill-fated ship, can be filed in the U. S. District Court for loss of life and property. Damages in excess of $10,000,000 already have been asked.

The amount in which the Oceanic Steamship Co. is liable will be announced in a decision to be handed down this week by the U.S. District Court.

Big Belgian Strike Already Involves 200,000 Workers.

Those Who Have Walked Out In Agitation For Manhood Suffrage Are Only Two-Thirds of Number Predicted and Clerical Press Calls It a Fiasco-Public Service Is Carried On, But Trade Is at Standstill.

BRUSSELS, April 15.-The great strike of the workingmen in Belgium to force the Government to grant them the suffrage, began quietly yesterday, and at nightfall it was estimated 200,000 throughout the country had quit work. This number is at least 100,000 short of the Socialist predictions, and the clericalist press is beginning to call the movement a 'fiasco.

Nevertheless the strike has shown greater strength than was expected by impartial observers, and because of the fact that the numbers increased as the day advanced it is generally believed that the strikers will be reinforced by several thousands to-

The strike thus far has been marked by neither disturbances nor special inconveniences to the general public. The gas, water, electric and street cleaning services and the street cars and railroads are in operation as usual, but the Brussels merchants say that trade is at a standstill. To the north are the graves of his grand parents, Joseph and Sarah. Like the others, the grave of the newcomer will be marked by a small brown headstone, inscribed: John Pierpont Morgan, 1836-1913."

In lieu of a headstone there towers to-day a monument of flowers, masses of roses, lilies, orchids, ferns and cedar boughs, heaped in a huge pyramid over the grave.

Hartford, the financier's birthplace, had its flags at half-mast under a lowering sky when the seven-car funcral train, manned with a crew that had operated Mr. Morgan's special trains during life, arrived shortly after two o'clock, bearing 75 mourners.

Fifty Thousand Roses.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Funeral services over the body of J. Pierpont Morgan was held at 10 o'clock yesterday morning in St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, where he had worshipped for half a century. Afterwards a special train conveyed the funeral party to Hartford, Conn., for final services at the Morgan mausoleum in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Blanketed by a covering of 5,000 red roses, Mr. Morgan's favorite flower the coffin left the Morgan library shortly before ten o'clock. A vested choir of 250 preceded the funeral party into St. George's.

Fifteen hundred persons crowded into the church. Admission was by card only. A crewd that the police estimated at 25,000 persons, choked the thoroughfares leading to the church. Many of the spectators had been waiting for hours. A hundred policemen kept back the throngs.

So great was the crush when the bells began tolling as the funeral party left the Morgan home that for several blocks in each direction the police stopped all vehicular traffic.

"BLOOD IS THICKER THAN WATER"

Without good red blood a man has a weak heart and poor nerves. Thinness of the blood, or anaemia, is common in young folks as well as old. Especially is it the case with those who work in illy ventilated factories—or those who are shut in pindoors in winter time with a coal stove burning up the oxygen or emitting carbonic (oxide) gas. This blood, or blood which lacks the red blood corpuscles, in anaemic people may have been caused by lack of good fresh air breathed into lungs, or by poor digestion or dyspepsia. Sometimes people suffer intense pain over the heart which is not heart disease at all, but caused by indigestion. Whatever the cause, there's just one remedy that you can turn to—knowing that it has given satisfaction for over 40 years.

WHAT CLOSURE WOULD HAVE DONE.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier: "There was obstruction in 1896 when the Government undertook to deal with the Manitoba School question, which had been before it for six years. The Government at last in the dying days of a moribund Parliament introduced a measure in which there was not enough to give justice to the minority, but more than enough to irritate the majority and make it feel a great wrong. We fought that measure and demanded that it be referred to the people. If the closure Mr. Borden now proposes had been in force, Parliament would have been gagged and the Dominion would have been suffering under a great wrong from a gagged Parliament, the consequences of which would be impossible to was contrary to the rules, and quoted May, the recognized authority on procedure, "Nor can the previous question be moved upon a motion relating to the transaction of public business.

to the transaction of public business."

The Speaker had evidently been posted as to this and peremptorily ruled against Dr. Pugsley, declaring "I have gone into this very carefully many times, and I do not think a review of it would change my decision."

GOVERNMENT AGAIN AR-BITRARY.

Dr. Pugsley pleaded for the time to look up authorities, but this was re-fused, so he at once moved the adjournment of the House so as to gain time till 6 o'clock. "Rt, Hon. R. L. Borden," he declared, "has said that as long as he was Premier, the Opposition could depend upon fair play. though the Speaker has recognized Sir Wilfrid Laurier as having the floor has allowed Mr. Northrup to come forward with a cut and dried motion to force it through, and the Premier led his forces in voting that a man has the floor who has been ruled out by the Speaker. Can he now say that the Opposition is to get fair play? If these are the sort of rules to be meted out if this closure carries, then, God help the minority and God help the people of this country. After what we have seen this afternoon, can we all the might at our command. Am I to be told that in exercising this power of strenuous opposition we do anything not in accord with the best tradition of Parliamentary government? There are occasions when the Opposition owes it to the force at its command, and this doctrine goes back to the days of Charles I." to the days of Charles I Mercilessly Sir Wilfrid riddled Mr. Borden's contention that without closure obstruction might force an election every year. "Obstruction election every year. "Obstruction cannot be of any avail unless it is backed by a strong expression of public opinion. It cannot be employed except on an important occasion. If a party were to obstruct on a trivial occasion t would less the country's occasion it would lose the country's confidence and forfeit its chance of again creating any impreasion on the people."

VALUE OF OBSTRUCTION.

As to obstruction itself, Sir Wilfrid showed its value from history. There had only been obstruction previously four times during the 45 years since Confederation. First in 1885 the Liberals obstructed on the Franchise Bill, and secured important improvements to it which they could not otherwise have obtained. There was obstruction in 1896 on the Manitoba Schools Bill, and as a result "the country was saved from a great wrong the consequences of which it would be impossible to calculate," and which would have been inflicted if the government had been able to use closure.

There was obstruction in 1908 over the electoral lists provisions for British Columbia, Manitoba and the unorganized portions of Ontario. The govern-ment thought there was fairness in the Opposition attitude and offered a compromise which was accepted. "I then found no fault with the course of the Opposition. I never whined. As Leader of the Government, believing I had been wrong, I thought it fair to offer the olive branch. Is not that better than closure?"

DEFEAT WITH HONOR.

There was obstruction in 1911, when the Liberals introduced the Reciprocity Bill early in January, and could not reach even a preliminary vote on July 26th. "We were met at every step with dilatory speeches and motions, and this in the dog days. I did not complain. I did not whine. Two courses were open tome. I could have done what is being done to-day by Mr. Borden and introduced the closure. There was another course, an appeal to the people, and I advised my colleagues to give that to the Opposition. Reagues to give that to the opposition.
We appealed to the people and were defeated, AND I WOULD RATHER TO-DAY STAND HERE DEFEATED AND IN OPPOSITION BY THAT APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE THAN TO STAY THERE IN OFFICE BY THE POWER OF THE GAG."

This spirited declaration caused a tremendous demonstration. The entire Opposition jumped up as one man, cheering and waving their handkerchiefs, until finally the Speaker interposed with "I must appeal to Gentle-men of the House to keep some semblance of order.

INTRODUCED MACHINE POLITICS.

"I ask nothing more" resumed Sir Wilfrid "than an appeal to the people once more. I do not envy my right once more. I do not envy my right honorable friend the position he takes to-day. THIS IS THE FIRST IN-TRODUCTION INTO CANADA OF MACHINE POLITICS."

This immediate application of the gag had prevented the Liberal Leader from introducing an amendment he had proposed, "That this House do not proceed now with the consideration of this Resolution, but that it be trust the Premier or the gentlemen referred to a special committee to behind him?"

INSULTED SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

Borden-Rogers Combination Applied "Gag" to Opposition Leader on Closure Debate.

Ottawa, April 12th, 1913 .-- Never in the history of the Canadian Parliament has such a studied and staged insult been offered by a Government to the Leader of the Opposition as the Borden-Rogers Government was guilty of on Wednesday afternoon on the opening of the debate on the closure. Hardly had Mr. Borden ceased his assurances that his closure would "secure members of the Opposition in their whole rights regarding any public measure when a peculiarly public measure when a peculiarly offensive application of the "gag" was made to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, evidently with the connivance of Premier Borden, which conclusively showed what the Opposition had to expect if the Government secured the unlimited powers of the closure.

Since Confederation when the Prime Minister has introduced any important measure it has been the rule for the Opposition Leader to reply, outlining the Opposition policy and thus settling the course of the debate. That courteous practice had never been broken until Wednesday, March 9th. It remained for the genius of Messrs. Borden and Rogere to break this custom.

By an evidently pre-arranged plan when Sir Wilfrid Laurier rose, Hon. Mr. Hazen also rose, and a moment later Mr. W. B. Northrup of Hastings. Each of the three remained standing and Speaker Sproule rose trembling with excitement. He formally declared that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had the right to speak, when Mr. Northrup the very rule which is being made the foundation of the closure, and which has never before been invoked, moved "that Hon. Mr. Hazen be now heard.

There was a momentary silence of amazement which was broken by Sir Wilfrid who demanded, "Is that what you call fair play" and sat down.

In a moment the Chamber resounded with the cries of the Opposition of "shame" and "gag." When quiet was restored, the Speaker instead of enhis rule that Sir Wilfrid forcing his rule that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had the floor put Mr. Northrup's motion.

Sir Wilfrid demanded that it be made to read, "the member for Quebec and the member for St. John, having risen about the same time, "significant-ly remarking "I want the country to know the truth about this.

Speaker Sproule replied that he could not go outside the motion, but had intended to state that two members had risen and he had decided that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had the floor.

The vote was immediately taken in a threatening atmosphere very differ-ent to the usual liveliness of such scenes, but the division was sufficiently lively. A perfect storm of jeers greeted the Premier and Hon. Mr. Rogers, as they led the Government in voting that Sir Wilfrid Laurier be deprived of his right to speak, which jeers were continually renewed, to be suddenly changed to a tempest of cheers when Mr. Lavallee, the Con-servative member for Bellechasse refused to stomach such a proceeding and voted against it. The "gag" rule carried by 105-67.

WOULD NOT HEAR MR. HAZEN.

A violently hostile reception awaited Hon. Mr. Hazen, who tried again and again to speak, but not a word could be heard. In despair he finally handed the typewritten motion he had brought with him to the Speaker that the previous question-Mr. Borden's closure resolution-be now put. This was the trick so carefully prepared because under the rules it precluded amendment

Hon. Dr. Pugsley immediately rose to point out that this arbitrary course Opposition is to get fair play? If these are the sort of rules to be meted out if this closure carries, then, God help the minority and God help the people of this country. After what we have seen this afternoon, can we trust the Premier or the gentlemen behind him?

When the House rose for dinner, there was another vigorous demonstra-While the Government benches emptied in shame-faced silence, the Opposition members gathered around Wilfrid and for over five minutes made the rafters ring with cheers, which were joined in enthusiastically by the crowd in the galleries. It was one of the most remarkable scenes of a remarkable session.

SIR WHERID'S GREAT SPEECH.

It was a repitition of this triumph throughout the whole evening. After Hon. Dr. Pugsley had easily exposed the Government pretensions that this guillotine was really a merciful measure the formal vote was taken. and the discussion on the closure resolution proceeded, with the additional closure that no amendment could be

While the proceeding succeeded to this extent it prepared a whip for the Government backs, for Sir Wilfrid was never in better fighting trim, and the House fairly rocked with cheers as he exposed the hypocrisy of the Government.

"The Premier," he said, "was profuse in promises that when these rules were adopted the minority could always rely upon fairplay. The words were scarcely out of his mouth before we knew how much fair play we could expect. In the exercise of that "fair play" the Premier saw Mr. Northrap ask the majority to take from me the privilege which was my constitutional right and give it to a member of the Government, and every member on the government side from the premier himself, rose to gag me and impose the gag on this side. I had an amendment to make, but I cannot make it now. That shows the amount of fair play we can expect."
"To-day" he said "these rules are to be stabbed: these rules are to be put aside and we are to have the gag substituted for them. I have read in Conservative papers that construction is the murderer of Parliamentary government. If that is the case murderers are on the government side, and it does not lie in the Premier's mouth to say that obstruction is not within the rights of a Parliamentary minority.'

DID NOT PREVENT BUSINESS.

"It has been charged that we have prevented the King's government from being carried on. Sir, I deny that charge altogether. There is not a word of foundation for it. If the business of this House is not further advanced than it is the fault cannot be laid at our door, but to the other side. Whenever supply was demanded we voted it. When any matter of public importance was brought up we discussed and passed it fairly. was no obstruction to the Bank Bill, nor to the Japanese Treaty. This immediate application of the try and secure the closure; gag had prevented the Liberal Leader from introducing an amendment he had proposed, That this House do not proceed now with the consideration of this Resolution, but that it be referred to a special committee to assist the Speaker in examination of of the same and report upon it, in accordance with the established and binding rules of this House.'

That this was the constitutional course was shown by Sir Wilfrid. In 1867 the Rules had been drafted by a special committee, then referred to committee of the whole House, which course had been pursued in every sub-sequent revisison of the Rules. "But my right honorable friend had a gag of his own. He had resolved to gag the House and not allow free discussion in the special Committee or committee of the whole."

CLOSURE BADLY DRAWN UP.

The necessity for this was obvious, since Sir Wilfrid showed that on many points the clauses did not mean what their authors had intended. "We are told that the recent motion regarding Hon. Mr. Coderre under the Rules would be a routine motion and so could be discussed. Could any man in his senses say that a motion impeaching a Minister of the Crown was a routine motion? What an absurdity that would be. My Right Honorable friend says that so long as he holds his place such a motion would be treated as a routine motion. But he is not immortal. And what for instance would happen if his place were to be taken by Hon. Mr. Rogers? God forbid. We want the Rules established as they should be read, and if it does not convey the intended meaning it should be referred to committee of the whole."

Sir Wilfrid said he had planned another amendment for the excision of Clause 4 altogether. "I ask if the government's talk of fair play is not a mockery when they put such a clause there. You say the closure is necessary to the passage of the Naval Aid Bill, but that clause has nothing to do with naval aid. It is intended simply to deprive the minority of their most valuable weapon in Parliament, and that it is to put up grievances before voting supply. It is a most valuable right of the citizen which has been in force over 600 years which it is proposed to take away to-day. That is applying the gag with a vengeance.

"But I will say to the Premier, As you sow so shall you reap; As you are fair so you will meet fairness; As you are unjust so you will meet unjustness. The poison he is sowing to-day will come again to his own lips at some future day. We are in the minority. We can be gagged and prevented from expressing our opinions. They can trample upon our bodies, but, Sir, a day of reckoning will come, AND IT WILL COME AS SOON AS HAVE WE HAVE A DISSOLUTION OF THE PRESENT PARLIAMENT."

WHAT THE CLOSURE MEANS.

Gag can be applied at pleasure of Government and the "Interests."

The Government's proposed closure resolution has at last been brought forward. It was announced in the Government organs as not a closure but merely arevision of the rules. As a matter of fact, it is a system of closure so drastic that when it becomes law Canada will no longer be governed by Parliament, but by the Cabinet; the Government will be able to practically ignore the opposition, and at the same time force supply through without that discussion which has hitherto been the chief protection of the country against extravagance and corruption.

Broadly speaking the measure provides for a strict closure on any issue after a day's notice by a Minister of the Crown; that all but certain specified have gained it they will use lessly to force through legi such measures as the Bill millions of special aid to the Northern, the Banking Bil vision of the Tariff, the High Bill, and similiar extremely c measures.

A GREAT CONTRAST.
Sir Wilfrid Laurier discussing the closure.

"The remedy is not the closure nor the application of brute force. The remedy is an appeal to the people. They, after all, are the judge and jury, and this is the mode I should have expected on such an occasion as this the Leader of the Government would have adopted. When I compare my conduct with his, I am proud that I resisted all application for the introduction of closure, but that when the time came I appealed to the people as I did."

WHAT IS SOLUBLE? DOCTORS ADVISE

Everything in the Universe Is, Say the Scientists.

GLASS DISSOLVES IN WATER.

And if a Bar of Gold Be Placed Upon a Bar of Lead Each In Time Will Absorb Particles of the Other-Solid Matter a Mass of Whirling Atoms.

What is soluble? Sugar in water? That's easy, although you have to be born in Kentucky to perform the trick in the mint julep trade.

Is glass soluble in water? Offhand we say no. We are wrong. It is. You can try it yourself.

Take an ordinary eight ounce water glass, a glass that holds eight ounces, grind it up to a powder and pour the powder into another glass full of water and stir it up. Then analyze it, or, if this is above you, take it around the corner to a man who can, and he will tell you, and with truth, that the water in that glass had actually dissolved 3 per cent of the glass powder.

Glass is soluble, nearly as soluble as bichloride of mercury.

Everything is soluble in water. Furthermore, everything in the universe is soluble in everything else in the universe. That is what they are telling us now, and the men who tell us can perform an astonishing experiment right before your eyes to make you more than half believe them.

They take a bar of gold and a bar of lead. They lay one bar on top of the other. Then they sit around and smoke cigars and wait, say a year. Then they take the two bars and analyze them chemically. In the gold bar they find lead. In the lead bar they find gold. Gold and lead are soluble in each other.

If you haven't time to wait a year to find out, the trick can be performed in much shorter time. All that has to be done is to raise the temperature of the two bars to a very ordinary heat-say 300 or 400 degrees F. With this added heat the same results are reached overnight. Traces of gold are found all the way through the lead bar and vice Tersa.

The theory is that all substances, whether gold or butter or leather, are really composed of the smallest kind of small particles-about the size of the particles making up the tail of the late lamented comet, which were described as the elemental essence of nothingness. These particles, which are as much bigger than an atom as a mountain compared to a mouse, are in motion, revolving round each other faster than thought, much the same as the planets revolve round the sun.

If our microscopes were big enough a chunk of gold would appear to our eyes much the same as a fly hopper full of flies (the kind of hoppers they keep in the cheese department of a country grocery store in August). The particles are buzzing and jumping much the same as these flies.

When a bar of gold comes in contact with a bar of lead their respective revolving buzzing particles get together and get acquainted. They go explor-

A BADLY ABUSED WORD.

Many Base Uses to Which "Infinite" Is Put Nowadays.

What is happening to the word "infinite?" It used to have great and rare associations and serve great needs.

Now I meet it everywhere and with every possible application. One bonnet is infinitely more beautiful than another, one brand of wine infinitely preferable to the next. He has an infinite desire to see her; she would infinitely prefer a hobble skirt to one with gores. One novel is infinitely superior to its predecessor; a character in it infinitely prefers game to domestic fowl. There is no association too trivial for it, no use too petty. Our books and our newspapers alike bristle with misused "infinites." The word, like Laurence Sterne and Lord Byron, has become a social literary success, and no worse fate can befall a great author or a great word. It is taken up by the fashion papers and by society journals, and this season's styles are usually infinitely prettier than the last.

ocouch players regard the conditions of Alpine curling as somewhat too luxurious. The ice is almost too perfect, and the tactics that proved successful on the rough ice of a Scottish pond have to be abandoned in favor of more subtle methods.

The ordinary visitor to the Alps has very little idea of the science and work which are necessary to insure a good rink, and the Scotch curler who has been accustomed to the rough ice formed by a few nights' frost is somewhat startled when he sees an army of icemen working through the night. A rink in the Alps is a costly business. The ground is carefully leveled in the spring, and after the first fall of snow a squad of icemen tramp the snow down as evenly as possible. The flooding is done in a series of claborate stages, which can be carried out only when the sun is shining.

The secret of good ice is to go slowly. This was proved by a clever experiment. The discovery of this was due to Rudolph Bauman, perhaps the best iceman in the Alps. He filled two wooden tubs with water, and the first froze hard in a night. The second was allowed to fill gradually, drop by drop, throughout a fortnight, The two blocks of ice were then put in the sunshine, and, whereas the ice that had been formed in a single night disappeared within a week, the other block survived for three weeks.

The ice is carefully doctored every night with the skill of a first class surgeon. Small holes are trimmed and scooped out with a knife. They are then filled with finely powdered ice and sprinkled with boiling water. The result is an absolutely even surface of good ice.-London Times.

A Handy Measure.

If you have a pint jug and wish to measure off half a pint with tolerable accuracy it is useless to try and do so by guessing when the jug is half full. A better way is to tilt the jug until the contents just reach to the upper end of the bottom of the vessel and just touch the lip at the lower end of the mouth. In this way the space in the pint jug is practically cut into two equal portions, each half representing the space taken by half a pint.

Observations of the Caddie

The caddie's chastening influence on the conceit of players has numberless anecdotal examples. One of the best of these is the following:

"What sort of game does Mr. Jones play?"

"He canna play nane."

"I'm going out with him tomorrow. I suppose I shall beat him."

"Na, ye will not."-Windsor Magaparticles are buzzing and jumping much the same as these flies.

When a bar of gold comes in contact with a bar of lead their respective revolving buzzing particles get together and get acquainted. They go exploring and are lost, and before long, instead of having a bar of pure lead and a bar of pure gold we have two bars of alloyed metals.

This discovery has upset all sorts of scientific calculations. If everything is soluble in everything else-and scientists can go on duplicating the goldlead example without end-how can anything exist in a pure state? It can't. Chemists dispense chemicals under the label "C. P." or "chemically pure," but if a Dr. Wiley got after them on the strict letter of the new theory he would send them all to jail, because the chances are that all alleged pure chemicals have absorbed a little of everything they came in contact with in the process of their manufacture.

Analytical chemists of this day have to take into account the amount of glass any given solution contains, when they are testing that solution in test a tube. Otherwise their results wouldn't count for anything.

This discovery suggests an explanation of that mysterious element in outdoor life, scent. How can a hound trace his quarry? Everything a man touches dissolves a little of him. When his foot falls on the ground he leaves a trace of himself. In warm weather or in wet weather he leaves a bigger trace than in cold or dry weather. A bound follows a damp trail. Usually his sense of smell is not acute enough to follow a dry trail.

The suggestion that a fugitive pursued by a bloodhound actually dissolves a few particles of himself every time his foot touches the ground, just as though he were a lump of sugar in water, sounds fanciful, but it is appearing more and more reasonable in the light of recent researches .- F. I. Anderson in Chicago Record-Herald.

fashion papers and by society journals, and this season's styles are usually infinitely prettier than the last.

Infinitely pretty! Not only careless journalistic folk who like to produce an emphatic effect -at any cost-are guilty. My learned friends put it to common use. So do I when I forget. We are infinitely obliged nowadays to one who gives us a lift of a few blocks and infinitely grateful for our Christmas presents. Our greatest and best authors vie with one another in bringing this great word down from its high estate, and it is only a few days since I heard a most fastidious man of letters lecturing in Boston say that the Sunday supplements would be infinitely more diverting if something-I forget what-were different. The robin's note in "Fiona Macleod" is "infinitely winsome." Even as critical a writer as Mrs. Anne Douglas Sedgwick speaks of a heroine "infinitely malleable" through love and of a fat young German musician as feeling "infinite compassion." That, to be sure, is better than Arnold Bennett's description of a woman as "infinitely stylish."-Scribner's.

The Operation of Trepanning Was Common In Ancient Times

While the medical profession is agreed that some rough form of surgery must have existed from very ancient times, it has always been a matter of wonder that so complex and delicate an operation as trepanning should also be one of the oldest.

There is authentic record of this operation dating back to the time of Hippocrates, who wrote treatises on fractures, dislocations and wounds of the head, wherein he described the method of procedure to be followed in the case of a fractured skull. His idea was to cut away a piece of bone so that the pressure on the brain might be relieved.

The annals of this era also show that a file was used for this purpose, which, at a time when modern anaesthetics were unknown, must have been, to say the least, painful,

According to Holmes, the operation of removing pieces of bone was performed long before historic times. The effects on the skull are easily seen after death and are visible as long as the bones are preserved. From inspection of certain skulls of the later stone age in ancient Britain there has been derived the conclusion that some of these had undergone the operation, which must have been performed with a stone implement.-Harper's Weekly.

Origin of St. James' Palace.

Henry VIII. when he built St. James' palace designed it for a country residence to take the place of the manor of Lennington, where he had been in the habit of going for a change of air. He pulled down the hospital dedicated to St. James the Less and on its site, as Holinshed tells us, "built a goodly manor and made a faire parke for his greater comoditie and pleasure." The palace stood in the midst of fields well stocked with game, and these were inclosed as its private demesne. Even while residing here Henry held his court first at Westminster and then at Whitehall after he had taken the latter palace from Wolsey. It was not until 1697, when Whitehall was destroyed by fire, that St. James' palace became the London residence of monarchs.-London Standard.

Many object to local option or pro-hibition on the score that either one interferes with the liberty and free will of the individual and in proof of their opinion quote many able thinkers, among them the scholarly Goldwin Smith. But despite this weighty argument, more and more people are awakening to the realization that anything which militates against the fund of the state must be done away with, even if in so doing individual freedom is somewhat curbed. Nor can any thoughtful person, reading the shame ful annals of the crimes committed year after year as the direct result of drunkenness, fail to see that, alcohol isn is an enemy to the state. Not only do these crimes cost the state much in lives, for in many cases they are murders, but in actual dollars and cents their drain upon the public treasury is great. So that the plea, that the money obtained from licensing the the liques traffic is recognized. ing the the liquor traffic is necessary for the up-keep of the state, is seen to be baseless. Constantly we are struck by the deadly toll that the fell disease, tuberculosis, demands of each state year by year. Much time and money is annually expended to obtain a means of curtailing the fatal results of the white man's plague, but drunkenness has just as fatal results and here the remedy lies in the hands of the citizens themselves and yet many seem blind to the need there is to crush out this evil.

"Seven Days."

One of the most brilliant comedies of a decade will be seen during the engagement of "Seven Days," at the Napanee Opera House, on Friday, April 25th. This international success was first produced at the Astor Theatre, New York City, and enjoyed a phenomenal run of three consecutive seasons in that city. It was later produced in London, England, where it is at the present time duplicating its American record. "Seven Days" is the work of Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood. The story deals with the complications of an ill-assorted party, who assembling for a dinner given by one of New York's smart set, were strictly quarantined for seven days by the board of health, one of the servants having been taken to the hospital as a smallpox suspect. The hospital as a smallpox suspect. host has been amicably separated from his wife. Ignorant of this, his wealthy aunt makes her first visit to his home. FORMALIN TREATMENT FOR SMUT.

Loose smut of oats can be entirely prevented by treating the seed oats with formalin. The method is simple. Sweep the barn floor off good and clean and scatter the seed grain two to four inches thick on the floor. Then sprinkle with a solution of one pint formtlin to with a solution of one pint formtlin to 40 gallons of water, using an ordinary watering can. The grain is then mixed up with a shovel and sprinkled agam. With the second application of the spray every grain will be moist but not wet. Then shovel the whole mixture into a corner, and cover well with blankets or old sacks to retain gases. The grain will swell a little and therefore sow a little heavier than untreated seed. The oats should be sown as soon

The formalin kills the spores attached to the seed oats. When the issown untreated, the spores are sown with the oats and germinate along with the young and tender oat plant. The fungus pierces the stem of the oat and from then on lives as a parasite in the tissues of the plant. As the oats ripen the fungus develops spores in the head of the plant, thus preventing any seeds being formed in an affected oat plant, The spores blow about in the air and attach themselves to healthy oats. These infected oats if sown will produce smut in the crop. The cost of treating oats with formalin is so little that no farmer should sow oats without treat-

At the Ont. Agricultural College oats treated with formalin produced a crop entirely free fromsmutted heads while the untreated seed produced 5.7% of smutted heads in 5 years experiments.

The formalin treatment will also prevent bunt or Stinking Smut of Wheat but will not prevent the loose smut of barley or Wheat.

Precept Illustrated By Example-God's Great Lessons F. Men and For Angels-Satan and Christ-The Great Rebil and His Failure-God's Loyal Son and Fili Victory-Are Held Up To Us for Examples.

Toledo, Ohio, April 13. — Pastor Russell is here today, addressing Bible students. We report one of his addresses, from the text: "Humble text: "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that He may exalt you in due time." — 1 Peter - 1 Peter 5:6.

The Pastor declared that the Bible everywhere holds up the Lord Jesus Christ as the glorious Pattern of what is most pleasing to the Heavenly Father, to be copied by all desiring God's favor. He reminded his hearers that certain steps are necessary before any can come into that favor, and properly be called God's children. Both our Lord and His Apostles make this point very clear.

Very few have God's favor at the present time, said the Pastor. In God's due time, however, all shall be brought to a knowledge of Messian, and privileged through Him to enjoy everlasting life. But what is coming and what is here are two different things. No one has authority to make the Narrow Way a Broad Way, or to say that many will find it, when the Scriptures declare, "Few there be that find it."

The Pastor showed clearly that his text related only to the consecrated few who, during this Age, heard and accepted the invitation to become footstep followers of Jesus. These have their sins forgiven as a result of faith in the precious blood of Christ, and of consecration to do God's will. These have the Redeemer as their Advocate.

To These Our Text Applies.

These are exhorted to come boldly to the Throne of Heavenly Grace, to obtain mercy and to find grace to help in every time of need. These may know that their prayers are always heard. The exhortations of the Apostles are to these alone - not to the

In our context, the Apostle holds up the Lord Jesus as the great Pattern of humility. St. Paul tells us that our Lord was rich, yet in obedience to the Father's will He laid aside His riches and became poor. He divested Himself of His spirit conditions and glories, and took instead human conditions.

From being above angels, He willingly took a nature and place "a lit-tle lower than angels." He did this, knowing that it was only a preliminary step, and that others of self-denial and suffering would follow. A man-Adam—had sinned, and had involved a race in his death sentence. Only an uncondemned man could redeem

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 14.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ended April 12, were 1500 cattle, 450 sheep and lambs, 3600 hogs and 2900 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1400 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 800 calves. A weaker feeling developed in the market for cattle this morning and prices deadlined 150 th 250 personnel.

HYDRO FOR THE FARMER.

In one of the most interesting debates of the whole session on the Hydro Electric System, Mr. Rowell, with a vigor and force which aroused great enthusiasm among his followers, proved several points. First - He showed conclusively that the Liberals, far from opposing the Hydro project, were anxious to lead in the movement and see to it that the farmers of the Province secured as speedily as possible the benefits of the system as well as the people in cities, towns and villages. Secondly-He secured from Hon. Adam Beck a tacit admission that the Liberal party's oppositon to the transference of the Hydro management from a Commission to a department of the Government was the wisest course. This admission amounted to an acknowledgement of a split in the Cabinet on the issue.

The debate was brought on by the motion of Thomas Marshall, Liberal Member for Monk, who called for the speedy extension of Hydro power to the farming communities and the building of electric radials in the rural sections of the Province. The Government forcasted progress, but refused to make definite statements.

LIQUOR LICENSE AMENDMENTS.

Mr. Hanna's amendments to the Liquor License Act have aroused keen There are certain good interest. features in the changes, but on the whole it must be admitted they are disappointingly meagre. To keep the bars closed from 6 to 8 o'clock in the morning is alright, but many expected that an hour or two would have been cut off at night, which would have been more of a real reform. There were also repeated rumors that the Government intended to close the bars on Saturday afternoon, but this information also proved to be incorrect.

The increase from $1000 to $1600 as the license fee for shops applies only to Toronto. General satisfaction among advocates of temperance is expressed with the clause prohibiting bottle trade over the bars. At best, however, the Bill is very evident only a half way measure.

RICH AND POOR.

"I can't see how it is fair to allow the fashionable people, the smart set from the cities to have the privileges the farmer or laborer is denied in the same district." This was one of the statements made by J. C. Elliott, Liberal Member for West Middlesex, in supporting the Bill of William Provides (fiberal Court Huster) Proudfoot (Liberal, Centre Huron) to exclude Club licenses from local option districts.

Mr. Proudfoot's Bill seemed eminently fair and logical, but the Govern ment voted it down. The two clubs now in existence in local option districts are the Caledonia Club and the one in Dumfries Township near Galt. Both are exclusive social organizations open only to the wealthy. Their members will still be allowed to obtain liquor at these clubs, although the districts in which they are located are under local option laws.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for cattle this morning and prices declined 15c to 25c per cwt, as compared with those of a week ago, which was due to the fact that supplies were much larger than they have been for the past two or three weeks. The weather was fine and cool and the gathering of buyers was large, including some from Quebec, and consequently the demand was good at the above reduction and an active trade was done, owing to the fact that the packers operated freely and several carloads were bought for shipment to Quebec. The top price paid was $7.75 for several extra choice picked steers by a leading butcher, but the bulk of the trading in a jobbing way was done in choice steers at $7.25 to $7.50, while sales of full loads of choice stock were made at $6.90

Every farmer wants to provide for his sons, but seldom will the old homestead, developed with toil, suffice to meet their needs. The boys have been brought up to the land. They are familiar withfall the phases of farming. They should have land of their own. How is the farmer going to meet this emergency?

The Logical Answer is Western Canada.

Thousands of acres, divided into 160 acre farms, are being thrown open for entry by the Dominion Government along or near the lines of the CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY.

The land gives a wide chance. There are some plots on the open prairie and others again in the well-wooded, well-watered districts in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

A large number of these homesteads are particularly adapted to mixed farming.

Any agent of the Canadian Northern Railway, or the undersigned will be glad to eend, on application full information as to the location of these homesteads and the way to secure and reach them. CHAPTER XV.

HE following day was an eventful one for the various members of the Renwyck household. Mr. Renwyck went earlier than usual to the city and in spite of a somewhat uneasy conscience worked ceaselessly to the furtherance of his harbor scheme. His triggers were set, and he only waited now for the trap to spring and catch Bill Williams in its fall and incidentally the Peace and Good Will guilibility-no, Realty company. Mr. Michael Corrigan was also quite busy during the day, though his occupation was a pleasant one. At least he seemed to derive intense amusement from the receipt of a number of lengthy telegrams from various points.

Richard, too, had occasion to use the wires, but in a different manner. Immediately after breakfast he made his excuses to the ladies and took a train for New York. At the telegraph office he sent out the following dispatch:

Mr. William J. Williams:

Mistake. Am all right and unhurt. Return to Austin at once and watch harbor deal.

RICHARD WILLIAMS.

The young man made a number of copies of the telegram and had them sent to various junction points along all possible routes between Texas and

New York, in the hope that his father might be intercepted on whatsoever train he might be a passenger and receive one of them. And in order to make assurance doubly sure he gave orders that the telegrams were to be repeated regardless of expense until the sendee had been reached. Richard. had a perfect right to say that he was well and unhurt, and in consideration of Mr. Renwyck's method of doing business he persuaded himself that he was also right in adding his noncommittal warning. By this he hoped to put the cattle king on his guard, in which case he trusted to his father's shrewdness to circumvent the enemy.

This duly discharged, Richard called at St. Luke's hospital and was much distressed to learn that Lord Croyland was not doing well at all. He had developed a high fever, and in his present condition could receive no visitors. Richard therefore could only leave the earl's mail, securely done up in a package addressed to Mr. Richard Williams, with the message that Mr. Peter Wilson had called and would come again within a day or two. Then, having nothing else to keep him in the city, after a stop at a flower shop he returned to Irvington.

In the meantime the final rehearsal of "The Man and the Bird" was materially interfered with by an upheaval of conflicting emotions on the part of Miss Imogene Chittendon. By the morning post that young lady received a letter, which she read through several times, then ran to her room, flung herself upon the bed and expressed her emotion in tears and hysterics.

Miss Renwyck, in passing through the hall, caught the sound of weeping and went in to comfort her. She found Miss Imogene in a truly pitiable state, and the better part of an hour elapsed before an intelligent explanation of the trouble could be obtained. Miss Chittendon told her story in jerky, disand went in to comfort her. She found Miss Imogene in a truly pitiable state, and the better part of an hour elapsed before an intelligent explanation of the trouble could be obtained. Miss Chittenton told her story in jerky, disjointed sentences, so interspersed with sobs and gasps that to quote her in detail would be an utter impossibility. The thread of the romance ran in this wise:

Several months previous to the opening of this narrative Miss Imogene had been a pupil in a fashionable young ladies' school in Morristown, N. J. Like many of her mates, she had carried on innocent flirtations beneath the very noses of certain stately gray headed wardens of propriety harmlessly enough. In her last and most violent affaire du coeur, however, she suddenly found cause bitterly to regret her rashness.

Mr. Roderick Fitzgeorge—the last

He was of a romantic disposition and appeared a very dashing blade, bewilderingly good looking to a pent-up schoolgirl in spite of a certain physical defect. The lieutenant was possessed of many other accomplishments, known and unknown to Miss Imogene, among which, according to the young lady's own statement, "he could make love just beautifully in the moonlight over a garden wall that was just covered with broken glass and a horrid wire with stickers all over it."

She felt certain that if caught the man would put his threat into execution and expose the copies of her letters to the eager gaze of society. To prevent such a happening she would gladly pay five times the sum demand-Therefore she decided hysterically that Harriet's plan was out of the

"Oh, Harriet, dear," she walled, "you don't know how silly my letters were, and I'd go through anything to get them back again. Why, the pet names I called that creature — good gracious, Harriet-they were positively mushy!"

"What did you call him?" asked Miss Renwyck, humorously interested in this phase of the romance.

"'Roddy-poddykins' was one," confessed the debutante, with a vivid blush. "Then there were a whole lot more like that and worse-really, darling, I'd rather not tell them even to you. I should die of shame if Mr. Van der Awe or Lord Croyland or any one knew.

Miss Renwyck smiled, while the indiscreet Juliet went on tying her handkerchief into hard, wet knots.

"I've just got to see him, Harriet. 1 know I shall be just scared to death; but, no matter what you say, I'll not allow you to tell a single solitary soul, and if I'm found dead on the library floor in the morning nobody will care anyway-so there!"

The sufferer's state now became so alarming that her friend was forced to suggest another plan. It was against her better judgment, but something had to be done at once, for otherwise Miss Imogene would never be in a condition to act the part of the bird in the play that evening.

"Imogene," she said sternly, "stop crying this instant and listen to me. I believe you will do a very wrong thing in seeing Mr. Fitzgeorge in the middle of the night, but of course I have no right to interfere against your wishes. I am older than you, and I tell you candidly I don't like it. How much money have you with you?

"Fifty dollars, and I'll give him jewelry enough to make up the balance."

"That won't be necessary. I'll lend you whatever you need, and if you still insist upon seeing the man I will go down with you."

In an instant more two very shaky little arms were twined about Miss Renwyck's neck and a sobby voice was pouring delirious thanks into her ears.

When the fear of creeping down a flight of dark stairs alone was eased by the thought of companionship the sentimental young lady began to view the affair in an entirely different light. It would be an adventure which appealed to her strongly. There would be no earthly danger, she argued, as each could be a protection to the other, while if the worst came to the worst their screams would quickly summon

The more Miss Imogene thought of it the more excited she became, declaring finally that she would gladly pay $100 -which somebody else had earned for her, by the way-just for the fun of the thing. She felt now that she had exaggerated the possibility of danger, as the wretched, disgraceful man was after money only and would go away instantly he had received it.

"You see," she explained, "he shows his intentions are not bad by his very

"Oh," said Miss Renwyck, "Uncle Michael told me never to trust a person with-with a cast in his eye!"

"Did he?" asked the debutante. "I wonder why. Oh, well, I'll never trust one-never again. Now, come on, precious, and let's tie the string on the gatepost?"

CHAPTER XVI.

T PON this eventful Friday, which might justly be termed "black" by the various persons connected with this narrative, two more gentlemen mentioned herein had occasion to use the telegraph lines vigorously.

The first was the Hon. Mr. Frank Kinwait, member of the upper house of the Texas legislature and chairman of the state improvement committee thereof. Contrary to Mr. Renwyck's positive statement, the distinguished legislator had not gone back to Austin. Instead he had quietly stopped over in Washington, held close communication with several mighty officials, then wired frantically to his most trusted lieutenant, the vice chairman of the state improvement committee at Austin, in a cipher code. These communications were imperative orders concerning the passage of a certain deep water harbor bill.

The Hon. Mr. Kinwait while in New York had held several conferences of a delicate nature, including that luncheon at Sherry's and other meals of a similar character elsewhere, and now deemed it expedient to be far away from the capital of Texas during the passage of the said harbor bill; therefore he gave the matter absent treatment, so to speak, though his meek associates on the committee carried out their leader's instructions to the letter. They had enjoyed no dinners in New York, but they were confident in a certain hope of at least partaking of the dessert vicariously through Mr. Kinwait.

The other person interested in telegraphy was the heavy hearted Mr. Bill Williams, himself en route for New York. Half a day before he reached Buffalo he received a dispatch from his son Richard, and for a quarter of an hour he was radiantly happy; then he received a second one couched in the same words, and it puzzled him. especially in the earnest warning to return to Texas at once and watch his harbor scheme. At Buffalo he received a sheaf of yellow envelopes which resembled a fine poker hand, in that there were four of them-all of the same kind.

exaggerated the possibility of danger. as the wretched, disgraceful man was after money only and would go away instantly he had received it.

"You see," she explained, "he shows his intentions are not bad by his very letter. If he had asked me to meet him outside in the dark somewhere I shouldn't have dared, but coming here into the library, where we can call for assistance, shows that he means no harm."

"But suppose he should not come alone?" suggested Miss Harriet.

"But he will," the other continued. "Besides, you and I will stand in the door on the opposite side of the room, and the moment we see two men instead of one, why, then, dear, we'll just begin to scream 'Fire!' or something like that, and then we can say we heard a noise and came down. Oh, Harriet, precious, do go and find a plece of white string!"

Miss Renwyck was not convinced. She did not lack courage for a woman, nor had she any actual fear of this man, who was clearly an ordinary petty blackmailer who tried to make profit out of an innocent schoolgirl's foolish correspondence. She could not imagine any other motive for his coming, inasmuch as the library window would be opened by an inmate of the house and closed and locked again immediately after his departure. Yes, clearly it was blackmail, and if Imogene had her letters returned intact perhaps it was the easiest solution after all.

"What sort of a looking person is this Mr.-er-Roddy-poddykins?" she asked, with a smile.

"Now, please do not call him that," begged Miss Imogene. "It makes me

In highly ornate language the cattle king expressed his belief that a trick was being played on him by his enemies, so he left the train and sought the nearest telegraph office. His friend, Mr. Loger, had failed to state the name of the hospital in which the son lay dying, and Mr. Bill Williams had not seen in the San Antonio papers the dispatch about his son, so the father wired all the hospitals in New York for information and lost three hours' time in waiting for answers. He received a number of replies from various institutions, eight of which disclaimed all knowledge of the patient. while the ninth advised him that Mr. Richard Williams of San Antonio, Tex., was truly confined in St. Luke's hospital and that his condition was not so favorable, owing to an increase of fever. Bill Williams was convinced some crafty trick was being hatched, but he hoped later on to settle with the ben. Meanwhile, whatever happened, he must go to his boy. He sent one more telegram and then hastened on to New York by the next train.

This telegram, addressed to Mr. Richard Williams, was received at St. Luke's hospital, and a pretty, fresh cheeked nurse took it to Lord Croyland's room.

"A telegram, Mr. Williams. Shall I open it for you?"

"Please," said the earl, with the listless indifference of a very sick man. "I dare say it is some beastly business matter. Read it."

The girl complied, reading as follows:

Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Richard Williams, St. Luke's Hospital,

New York: Cheer up, Dickie. Will be with you to-DAD. morrow morning.

Lord Croyland stared at the uniformed young lady while he fumbled fruitlessly for his monocle among the folds of his nightshirt.

"Rot!" he observed in languid disgust. "Haven't got a dad, you know. Some silly ass is trying to come a cropper."

The nobleman then turned on his pillow and closed his eyes, while the fair attendant looked thoughtful, took the patient's temperature and made a memorandum to the effect that his mind had begun to wander.

CHAPTER XIII.

N Wednesday morning two items appeared in one of the New York newspapers, neither of which would strike a casual reader as being important; but, so far as this narrative is concerned, they led to complications. The first was an obviously exaggerated report and read as follows:

TEXAN FATALLY INJURED.

Mr. Richard Williams, son of the famous millionaire and cattle king of San Antonio, Tex., was severely injured on Sunday last in an automobile accident.
He was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where our reporter called last evening.
Mr. Williams was too prostrated by the shock to be interviewed, but we learn from one in authority that the young man is suffering from concussion of the brain, besides sustaining a fracture of the shoulder and internal injuries. The accident was due to the carelessness of an inexperienced chauffeur, who gave his name as Peter Wilson, but whose address had not been ascertained up to a late hour last night. The police are making inquiries.

The above paragraph chanced to catch the eye of a certain Mr. Loger, who had taken the morning train for Chicago. He was an intimate friend of old Bill Williams and would have gone to look after the son himself except that urgent business necessitated the continuance of his journey west. Mr. Loger therefore wired his friend from Pittsburg, stating that Richard had been hurt and lay at the point of death in a New York hospitál.

On receiving this startling information the father became greatly agitated. He had not heard from Richard for several days and had begun to worry even before the receipt of Mr. Loger's telegram. He wired at once to the St. Regis, where he knew his son to be stopping, and received—an answer to the effect that Richard Williams had not been seen since the previous Monday morning, though his dress suit case and other belongings were still in room No. 926, which had not been given up.

Bill Williams, who loved his son as he loved no other being on earth, committed the deep water harbor and improvement business to his most trusted subordinate, although affairs had reached a critical stage, and started for New York on a special train.

The other newspaper item appeared in the social column under the head of "Gossip." It read as follows:

On Friday evening of the present week an entertainment will be given in the beautiful country home of Mr. Jacob Renwyck, at Irvington-on-the-Hudson. Among other features a little one act play will be presented, entitled "The Man and the Bird." in which Miss Imogene Chittendon, one of the season's most charming debutantes, will take the part of the bird, while the charming and accomplished Miss Renwyck will assume the leading role, wearing a costume ordered spacially for the accomplished Miss Renwyck will assume the leading role, wearing a costume ordered spacially for the accomplished Miss Renwyck will assume the leading role, wearing a costume ordered spacially for the accomplished Miss Renwyck will assume the leading role, wearing a costume ordered spacially for the accomplished Miss Renwyck will assume the leading role, wearing a costume ordered spacially for the accomplished Miss Renwyck will assume the leading role, wearing a costume ordered with the control of the cost of the cost clearly a lie, for Mr. Corrigan had seen him traveling in an entirely opposite direction and was more convinced than ever that a cast in the eye was the brand of a scoundrel. He declined to give the fellow money and watched him suspiciously until he left the place, feeling instinctively that something would bring him back again.

Richard, who was sitting on the lawn with Miss Harriet, had also seen the tramp as he limped through the open carriage gate into the road. Bills had ridden over to Tarrytown in quest of pipe tobacco for his master and was stopped by the vagrant at the entrance of the drive. Richard saw him bend in his saddle, confer with the man for a moment or two, then turn into the stable yard. Presently he reappeared and crossed to his master with the tobacco which he had secured.

"Navy Capstan, m' lord," he stated triumphantly, "the kind wot you smokes at 'ome, sir."

"Thanks," said Richard. "By the way, Bills, what was that queer looking beggar saying to you just now?"

Bills started slightly, as one ashamed of being seen in such evil company.

"Oh, 'im? Yes, sir. W'y, 'e was awskin' his way to the station, m' lord. A rum sort, I calls 'im, sir, beggin' your pardon for"—

"Yes, yes, Bills," Richard reproved, with a show of impatience. "That will do. You may go."

The valet bowed respectfully and departed, while Miss Harriet looked at her companion in polite surprise.

"Why are you so short with him?" she asked. "To me he is perfectly delicious. I don't believe he ever laughed in all his life, did he?"

"Don't know, I'm sure," drawled
Richard lazily. "I curb his tongue from necessity. The fellow is inclined to be loquacious. At times I am forced to—ah—sit on him."

Miss Renwyck laughed.

"Do you know," she said, "you are becoming an American very rapidly? Really, I am beginning to be quite vain of my success with a first pupil."

"My dear young lady," the Texan answered in a tone half banter, half in earnest, which was deeper than she dreamed, "if you should wish it I'd gladly become—er—a kangaroo."

Again Miss Renwyck laughed till the silvery echoes reached the ears of Michael Corrigan, who lounged on the front veranda.

"By George," he chuckled to himself as he rubbed his hands in the manner characteristic of him, "that young man is making progress!"

In the evening when Mr. Renwyck came up from the city Mr. Corrigan took him aside and related the day's with a cast in his eye."

For once Mr. Renwyck had got the better of his brother-in-law, and the fact pleased him immensely.

"The poor old granny!" he muttered as he went into the house. "Upon my word, I'm astonished at him!"

It may be stated that, contrary to Mr. Corrigan's flat denial, that gentleman did take further interest in the possible burglary, if only to prove his own theory. On the following night three private detectives came out to Irvington and stole separately to the lawyer's house. About 11 o'clock, accompanied by Mr. Corrigan in person, they concealed themselves at various points of vantage on the Renwyck place and awaited developments. The night was damp and gloomy-most excellent weather conditions for a housebreaking party, but with disadvantages for amateur detectives at the advanced age of sixty-one. Beyond a touch of rheumatism Mr. Corrigan bagged nothing, and the morning found him a very disgruntled old gentleman. However, there was a humorous side to the vigil, and with this the old lawyer consoled himself.

"Lord" he chuckled. "The joke's on me this time, but I wouldn't have Jacob find it out—no, not for a thousand dollars cash."

Meanwhile Mr. Renwyck, having scored decisively on Uncle Michael, enjoyed his dinner as a victor should. He was in the best of spirits, not alone because of his triumph, but because of certain cheerful developments which had come to light at the meeting of the stockholders of his new deep water harbor company. He was so elated over his certain success that he cast out broad hints which were mystifying enigmas to all present with the exception of Richard, who understood only too well. To him they meant the collapse of his father's cherished hopes, while he, a dutiful son, was forced to sit calmly and watch an enemy gloat.

Dinner was scarcely over when cailers were announced. They were old friends of the family, claiming the attention of Mr. and Mrs. Renwyck and Miss Schermerly, which left the four young people to their own devices. For this Richard thanked the visitors fervently and wandered with Miss Harriet across the lawn, where they seated themselves on a favorite bench and enjoyed a long and uninterrupted chat. Had Uncle Michael been present instead of sulking in his lonely bachelor home he might have had cause to exchange his frowns for chuckles, in view of the fact that a certain young scamp was assuredly making progress.

The progress was not of tremendous moment, after all, yet Richard forgot and the Bird," in which Miss Imogene Chittendon, one of the season's most charming debutantes, will take the part of the bird, while the charming and accomplished Miss Renwyck will assume the leading role, wearing a costume ordered specially for the occasion and the famous Renwyck diamonds. The entertainment, we understand, is given to a few intimate friends in honor of a distinguished guest, Lord George Fitz-Clarence de Courcy Howard, earl of Croyland. The affair promises to be an unusually brilliant one.

This breezy but otherwise unremarkable item caught the attention of one Jack Bibbs, a gentleman possessed of much ingenuity, some varied experience, quite a collection of aliases and a passion for acquisition. He had received no invitation to the above mentioned social function, though he hoped to profit thereby in ways best known to himself.

Mr. Michael Corrigan, returning from a business meeting in the city, took the 12 o'clock train for Irvington and went into the smoker, where he seated himself and lighted a short black pipe, the pet aversion of his refined brother-in-law, Jacob Renwyck, who visited most of his disgust upon his unfortunate wife. His business transactions in the city evidently pleased Uncle Michael vastly, for that gentleman kept chuckling to himself and rubbing his plump white hands in the manner of one upon whom good fortune has descended suddenly.

After a time his attention was arrested by two men on the seat opposite him. They were engaged in a whispered conversation while they ate their lunch from a brown paper parcel. To a casual observer there was nothing unusual in the appearance of the two passengers. They were roughly clad, unshaven and apparently poor, having the air of workingmen out of a job. Mr. Corrigan would probably have not noticed them at all except that one of them-the better looking, who if he had been shaved and well clad might have been called good looking-had a slight cast in his eye, a physical blemish which the old gentleman had ever regarded as a sort of name plate on the front door of a scalawag. He saw the man only a moment or two before getting out of the train, and in the stress of far more important matters the incident passed out of his mind. It was recalled later on. He was sitting on the front porch of Restmore, where he had just taken luncheon, when a tramp entered the place and came timidly to the house, begging for food in the usual professional whine.

Mr. Corrigan had small patience with tramps and was about to order him off the place when something changed his mind. The fellow had a cast in his eye. He recognized him instantly. It struck the old gentleman at once as being singular that this man should claim to be starving when not two hours before he had been eating heartily from a brown paper parcel in the train. Tramps did not usually travel by train-not inside of them, at any rate-which was an additional cause for suspicion, Uncle Michael determined to investigate the matter further, so he led the tramp to the back of the house, where a plate of bread and meat was set before him. He ate sparingly for a hungry man, but took in the premises with a seemingly careless eye, while the account he gave of himself was far from satisfactory He claimed to have come from Albany on foot, as was shown by the travel stained condition of his shoes, which was young man is making progress!"

In the evening when Mr. Renwyck came up from the city Mr. Corrigan took him aside and related the day's experience with the tramp, suggesting that a detective be employed while the valuable lot of diamonds was in the house. The two gentlemen, as has already been stated, never got on together peaceably. If one of them offered a suggestion the other found reason to combat it vigorously, and in this case Mr. Renwyck took the opposite side with a vengeance, poohpoohing the possibility of theft from start to finish.

"Why, my dear Michael," he said in a tone of undisguised scorn, "what you say is nonsense, pure and simple. The house is equipped from top to bottom with a perfect system of burglar alarms, which I set myself each night. Unless there is collusion with some person on the inside I not only defy any light fingered gentleman to enter, but I give him a cordial invitation to try. No, sir! If you want to put a Gatling gun in your own house, do so by all means. In mine I have no room for artillery or an army of Pinkertons. Now, don't you see how absurd you are?"

"All right," assented Mr. Corrigan.
"I've warned you, and that's all I've got to say. They're not my diamonds."
"Just wait a moment, Michael," said Mr. Renwyck, walking after him. "I want to show you what an idiotic stand you have taken. You say the man has a cast in his eye. Very good: I'll admit that, but I venture to say that in the state of New York there are from twenty to thirty thousand people with casts in their eyes. You claim that it is a mark of rascality. I don't agree with you. My own father had a cast in his eye."

"Don't doubt it in the least," snapped Mr. Corrigan. "That explains it. I've often wondered"—

"Come, come," laughed Mr. Renwyck; "you gain nothing by being personal. But listen. You saw a man in the train-though you confess you only glanced at him-and immediately recognized him as a bristly murderer who has committed the crime of being hungry. Did you see murderer No. 1 get off the train? No, of course not. He is probably dining in the bosom of his humble but honest family, while you, my dear sir, are aching to clap him in the penitentiary." Mr. Renwyck paused to laugh. "Really, Michael, you amuse me. Age is responsible for bad eyesight perhaps, but it is your poor old brain that troubles me. You have developed into a fussy old woman-Miss Michaela Corrigan, spinster, sixty-one and afraid to say 'boo' to a bat,'

The old lawyer paused suddenly in his walk and thrust the ferrule of his cane deep into the gravel path.

"Jacob," he said in a tone of suppressed anger, "that will do. You have gone just a little too far. I told you what I thought without any wish for an argument, and now I'll tell you something else. I don't care whether you lose your diamonds and plate or not. What's more, I hope you will. Good night."

He had intended staying for dinner, but changed his mind and swung rapidly away, while Mr. Renwyck looked after him, laughing merrily.

"Oh, I say, Michnela?" he called.

the troublous harbor company and all else, indeed, besides the lady and himself. Miss Harriet in tugging at a rosebush had wounded her finger with a tiny thorn, and the Texan at once became far more solicitous than he would have been had he himself been gored by the horns of a fractious steer. He found it imperative to examine her hurt by the light of matches which Miss Harriet struck and held in her unwounded hand, and the physician, therefore, required a much longer time than he might have taken under more favorable circumstances. At length he was forced to admit reluctantly that neither was there any danger of lockjaw nor was he studying palmistry, yet as the last match went out he applied a remedy by pressing the afflicted member to his lips.

True, Miss Harriet had snatched her hand away, but she smiled in the darkness and was not half so displeased as she tried to make this impertinent nobleman think. Nor was the impertinent nobleman half so contrite as he might have been, for before they left their seat he had bent his head and kissed her hand again on a certain dimple which had taunted him for several days.

His heart was singing now, and the words he set to music were the words of advice by his eminent counsel, Michael Corrigan:

If ever you hope to find your joy, You've got to brazen it out, my boy, For—

And here the heart's song ended abruptly, for Mr. Renwyck was calling them from the steps of the veranda.

"Croyland," he said laughingly as they came into the light, "if you and Harriet have finished your filrtation I'd like you to come into the library for a quiet smoke. There, Harriet," he chided, "you have had this young gentleman to yourself all day. You don't begrudge him to your hardworking father for an hour, do you? Kiss me and run along to your nest."

The Texan longed with all his soul to say the same, but was forced to part more formally, at the same time bidding good night to the rest of the little house party, after which he braced himself for an ordeal and followed Mr. Renwyck into the library, wondering what was coming.

This was the most un-English language which the supposed nobleman had yet employed, but it did not attract the notice or awaken the suspicion of Mr. Renwyck at that time, owing to his deep interest in the matter immediately in hand.

"Ah," he cried, "now you've laid your finger on a beauty spot! Of course Williams will fight me with tooth and nail; but, by the Lord Harry, he can't!"

"Why not?" "Simply because he will not be in Texas when my bill is passed."

Richard stared at his host in fear and wonder, while Mr. Renwyck continued jubilantly:

"I could not have had matters turn out better if I had arranged it all myself. It seems that Williams' fool of a son was up here in New York last week and got himself badly smashed up in an automobile accident."

'What, you don't mean"-

"Yes, it's true," added the speculator quickly without noticing Richard's look of astonishment. "Michael showed me a greatly exaggerated newspaper account yesterday morning."

'is he-er-mortally or dangerously hurt?" began Richard, who had in truth forgotten all about the condition of the real Croyland, and he now began to fear that the man who had assumed his name really might be more seriously injured than any of them had imagined. Richard was neither heartless nor indifferent; but, not suspecting Croyland's injuries were serious and being 'ully occupied with his own engrossing situation, he had not given the wounded earl a thought for

"I'm glad to hear it's no worse," murmured Richard, much relieved. "Go on, sir."
"It struck me at once that things might happen which would serve my interests when the father heard of the sad affair."

Richard glared at his sost and ground his teeth in impotent rage at this exhibition of a heartlessness that would make capital for itself in a business scheme out of such an accident. "I'll steal his daughter now without a twinge of conscience!" Aloud he asked with as much control as his thumping heart admitted, "Well, what then?"

The host, who, it may be admitted, had no feeling of hesitation at turning the incident to his advantage, however much he might and did deplore it, rubbed his hands and laughed once more in keen enjoyment of the unlooked for opportunity to get the better of his enemy. Mr. Renwyck was playing the game cold bloodedly, mercilessly, according to the rules of the street. He would do nothing dishonorable or underhand after the ethics of his kind, but he would have considered himself a fool if he had not availed himself of every opportunity or assistance that fate put at his disposal.

"What then?" he echoed. "Well, Williams did a thing which surprised even me. I have in my pocket a ci-....

hole of escape to be found. Perhaps if he could see Mr. Corrigan he could set advice; but, no, that gentleman had et advice; but, no, that gentleman had iready declined to help him, telling him he must brazen it out on his own account. Brazen it out? Yes, but how? Brass counted for nothing now, for Mr. Renwyck held all the cards. Reason did point to one possible course -to hedge on the winning side and save what he could for his father out of the wreck, and at this possibility the young man grasped as a drowning man reaches for a straw.

"Mr. Renwyck," he said, with a mighty effort to hide his agitation, "what you say convinces me. I have just $100,000"-his own private fortune from his mother-"in bank. I should like to place it in your enterprise."

The financier started.

"Well," be parleyed, "that is rather a larger amount than I had thought of handling for you. Still, a promise is a promise. Write me your check, Croyland, and I'll bring out your stock certificates tomorrow evening."

The name "Croyland" came to Richard like a blow between the eyes. In his intense excitement he had almost forgotten that he was another man. He could not use the earl's name for this purpose, of course, yet to sign Richard Williams to a check payable to Jacob Renwyck would be to confess all. As well wave a red flag in the face of a furious bull. Again he was experiencing the results of folly, but this time it contained no elements of humor whatever. He was in for it-a maverick surrounded on every side by whirling lariats, and soon a sizzling branding iron would burn its everlasting mark upon his hide.

"Mr. Renwyck," he faltered, desperately casting about for some practicable retreat from his dilemma, but in vain, "I fear, after all, that I won't be able to-to go on with you. My bankers-er"- he exclaimed, "I think I can "Ab," appreciate your difficulty. You doubtless bank in England, but that will not trouble us, I imagine." He opened a desk drawer and produced a pad of blank forms. "These are foreign drafts. Draw on your bankers at sight, and I will negotiate the paper through my own account and let you know the amount of exchange. You see," he laughed, "I am foreing you into a fortune, as it were. Really, I ought to charge you a commission."

The speculator looked puzzled.

The Texan took the blank draft handed to him, held it a moment, then slowly tore it down its length.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Renwyck, but-but I can't go in.

His companion eyed him critically for a full half minute. A moment ago he had volunteered to embark $100,000 in the enterprise, and now he would fain back out. What had changed him? The financier determined to probe this suspicious circumstance to the bottom.

"Why this sudden change?" he asked directly.

"Well, you see," began Richard, writhing inwardly at the falsity of his position, "I've been bitten in deals before, and while"- "Nonsense!" interrupted the old gentleman shortly. "You can't lose on this. Why, my dear sir, it's a dead certainty. What more do you want?"

"True," agreed Richard sadly, "and yet"— "There are no yets," interrupted Mr.

as being a rather unfair business method. I prefer to have nothing more to do with it."

Richard wanted a good slap at the unscrupulous old man and rejoiced in its delivery. It was Mr. Renwyck's turn to flush, though the condition wasbrought about by anger rather than shame. He was about to make a sharp retor; but checked himself and asked coldly:

"Why didn't you think of that whenyou offered to take $100,000 worth of shares?"

"I-I don't know."

"Ah!"

"It is sufficient that I did think of it before the money was paid, isn't it?" queried Richard, angry at this monosyllabic comment on his irresolution and vacillation.

"Quite," answered Mr. Renwyck in his most frigid manner. "Yet I think if you understood the circumstances better, Lord Croyland, perhaps you would view the matter in a different light. But every man has a right to his own opinion, and so, if you please, we will say no more about it."

He rose as he spoke to intimate that the interview was at an end.

"Thank you," shortly returned the Texan, "and now, if I may, I will say good night. I regret that I have taken up so much of your valuable time."

He crossed the library, unlocked the door and went upstairs without a backward glance, while the financier sat looking after him moodily. For many moments Mr. Renwyck did not move. His cigar went out and was held unheeded between his silent lips till at last he dropped it into a silver ash tray and, rising, sighed.

"Something surprising there. I don't quite understand. Who would have thought he would have taken it that way? I wonder if that was his real reason. I don't see that I'm to blame. I didn't run over the boy. Well, I'd be a fool not to take advantage of his father's absence. Besides, what difference does it make? He was a goner anyway. It's a life and death strugglebetween us. We used to be good friends. Is the Englishman right? I wish that—here, here, this won't do! I must go to bed at once. I can't make out that Lord Croyland. Seems as if I'd met him-er-what could be the matter?"

The millionaire paced the floor of his library for a quarter of an hour, then set his burglar alarms and went tobed.

Richard was equally uneasy. He looked at the little pile of Croyland mail that had accumulated, including several telegrams, which of course hehad not opened, and decided to take it to the hospital the first thing tomorrow. It was criminal for him to have neglected it and his friend as well. And there were other things he would do on the morrow.

The City of Roses.

Ispahan, Persia, is known as the "city of roses," but a traveler says that the streets "are only alleys between two high mud walls, without a single window or opening to be seen -merely here and there a low, narrow doorway, always impenetrably closed. "He is heading for New York as fast as steam can bring him and is leaving his harbor scheme wide open to my attack-not but what I had him beaten anyway, but this makes it a little plainer sailing."

Richard's cheeks, which had turned a deep and angry red, now grew deathly pale as he sank back into his seat again. In a far shorter space of time than it takes to tell it he realized each detail of Mr. Renwyck's coup d'etat and its crushing effect upon his father's plans. Then, too, his father's grief was cutting him to the heart. It touched him to the quick; it gripped his conscience with a burning vise. He had come north on his father's business, although not primarily for this deep water barbor scheme, of which he had known little or nothing, and now he was masquerading under a false name and title for his own pleasure. He must perforce be a helpless onlooker while enemies forged 'a shaft out of parental love and with it pierced the heart and brought about the ruin of his dear old dad. It was unbearable, impossible, yet what could he do?

What would happen when Bill Williams arrived? He, the hapless son, seemed to be in some way responsible for the whole wretched tangle, yet honor barred him from interposing a hand to prevent the catastrophe. Seek it where he would, there seemed no looptleman shortly. "You can't lose on this. Why, my dear sir, it's a dead certainty. What more do you want?"

"True," agreed Richard sadly, "and yet"-

"There are no yets," interrupted Mr. Renwyck. "It is not a question of my needing money, for I have plenty of my own. I made you the proposition simply and solely out of friendship, and"-

"And for that very reason," Richard cut in, "I must decline. I appreciate the spirit in which you have tried to help me, but circumstances render my acceptance impossible."

Again the financier regarded his extraordinary young friend critically through half closed eyes.

"Come, come!" he said bluntly at last. "Don't let's beat about the bush, What is your real reason?"

"Do you mean that?" asked Richard, rising to his feet.

"I do."

"Mr. Renwyck," he said in a clear, level tone which was now free from any deception, a brilliant idea coming to him, the more acceptable in that it was strictly true, "you are right. There are several reasons which we need not discuss. I shall mention one which is sufficient, and that is this: You are about to take advantage of a father's love for his son, which has removed an antagonist from the field. Pardon my speaking plainly, but it strikes me

tween two high mud walls, without a single window or opening to be seen —merely here and there a low, narrow doorway, always impenetrably closed. The ground is thickly-coated with dust; the streets are rarely straight, and never have they got any name. The sense of ruin is everywhere. Here a wall is falling down; there a palace is in ruins; a little farther on a deserted mosque is skirted. Such is Ispahan, which from having at one time a population of 1,000,000 is now reduced to about 100,000 inhabitants.

Palms of Muskat.

The use of the products of the palm are many in Muskat, Arabia. The sticks furnish timber which, though of a poor sort, is very valuable where no other is to be obtained; buds of the male palm are considered a great delicacy; the habitations of all the poorer natives are made of the fronds; the fiber of the stem is twisted into serviceable ropes; the seeds are pounded up and fed to cattle, while the fruit is at once the staple food of man and beast and an article of export equal in value to all other exports combined.

LIGHT, GAY DINING ROOM.

Use Colonial Landscape Papers e Panered Effects on Wall.

First of all, says Elsie de Wolfe in Good Housekeeping, I think a dining room should be light and gay. If possible always choose a room which has plenty of sunshine for a dining room. The next thing is the planning of a becoming background for the mistress of the house. The room should always be gay and charming in color, but the color should be selected with due consideration for its becomingness with relation to the hostess. Every woman has a right to be pretty in her own dining room.

The quaint landscape papers which are seen in so many New England dining rooms seem to belong with American colonial furniture and white woodwork, the prim silver and the gold banded china. These landscape papers are usually gay in effect and make for cheer. There are many new landscape designs less complicated than the old ones. Then, too, there are charming foliage papers made up of leaves and branches and birds which are very good.

I do not favor the dark, heavy treatments and elaborate stuff hangings which seem to represent the taste of most of the men who go in for decorating nowadays. Nine times out of ten the dining room seems to be the gloomiest room in the house. I think it should be a place where the family may meet in gayety of spirit for a pause in the vexations happenings of the day. I think light tones, gay wall papers, flowers and sunshine are of more importance than storied tapestries and heavily carved furniture. These things are all very well for the house that has a small dining room and a gala dining room for formal occasions as well, but there are few such houses. . Paneled walls are always possible. If you can't afford wood papeling, paint the plastered wall white or cream and break it into panels by using a narrow molding of wood. You can get an effect of great dignity by the use of molding at a few cents a foot.

OUTDOOR AMUSEMENTS.

Charming Games For Children to Play at Spring Parties.

These few suggestions may prove helpful to the mother who intends to entertain small folks:

A floral color trail is an interesting game. Any flower may be selected and fastened with narrow ribbon in twenty or thirty different places.

The flower is displayed to the children, and the number hidden is told.

Each child is given a pencil and card, and as he finds the flowers the place is carefully noted. Ground trails may be set with small green twigs.

This game is very popular with young folks in England.

The trail of the green leaf, which should be played out of doors, demands senses very much alert.

Any variety of green leaf is selected and fied to trees and shrubbery with small ends of green tape or ribbon.

The children are not told how many times it is hidden, but at the expiration of a given length of time are asked to disclose how many times they have detected the leaf and where.

Lastly bent in one cupful of sifted pastry flour, one-fourth cupful of potato flour (half a cupful of ordinary flour may replace the smaller quantity of potato flour), half a level teaspoonful of soda, says the Boston Cooking School Magazine, and a slightly rounding tenspoonful of cream of tartar sifted together. The cake should be less than three-fourths of an inch thick when baked. Trim off the crisp edges. Spread at once with marshmallow cream filling and roll up like a jelly roll. Roll in waxed paper and set aside a short time. Then spread the outside with "dot" chocolate melted over wasm water or with a confectioner's frosting made of a square of melted chocolate, three tablespoonfuls of boiling water, half a teaspoonful of vanilla and confectioner's sugar (sifted) as needed.

When Cleaning Ruys.

Avoid hanging rugs on the line, as it weakens the edges. Do not use a wire beater. Place the rug on the grass, beat lightly with a rattan beater on both sides. After this is done sweep on both sides, taking care to sweep with the nap. Wipe off with a cloth, wet in water and turpentine.

SCHOOL CHILD'S DIET.

Importance of This Health Factor
Often Overlooked by Parents.

The mother who wishes to preserve the health of the school child must attend carefully to the question of diet. The child at school is giving out energy all the time, and food is requisite to provide emergy for the work.

The child requires a good deal of fat. because fat provides energy, keeps the body warm and is necessary during the time of growth. Butter, cream and rich milk provide fat in easily digested form. The schoolboy's craving for suct dumplings is physiological in the sense that suct provides animal fat in a particularly suitable form for the schoolroom menu. Porridge and cream, white fish, soft boiled or scrambled egg. varied with fat bacon, and a cup of cocoa or milk provide a variety of choice for breakfast. The breakfast meal should be varied as much as possible. A little fruit may be served in season instead of porridge. Brown bread may occasionally be given instead of white. Rolls or scones or oatmeal cake, with fresh preserves, are excellent for break-

For dinner finely cut chicken, beef, lamb or mutton, with such vegetables as potato, cauliflower, spinach, vegetable marrow, followed by milk puddinglight pastry, chocolate shape or egg custard as a sweet, may be given. Fresh fruits in their season should be given two or three times a week at least for dinner, and baked apple with cream is an easily digested sweet for children.

The school child has generally only three meals a day, so that tea should be a more ample meal than that allowed for grownups. Plenty of bread and butter, with honey or homemade jelly, a little stewed fruit if it has not been served at dinner or breakfast and occasionally a scrambled egg or cheese custard, provide a nourishing tea when children have the appetite to digest it. It must not be forgotten, however, that to compel a child who is not hungry to Young girls always admire jaunty little coats like the one shown today. They suit their needs and are becoming. The coat illustrated, together with the smart plaited skirt, is one of the newest spring models for young girls and small women.

The coat is made with slightly overlapping cutaway fronts and a pretty back that is plain on one side and overlapped at the other. The material is dark brown velvet, and the skirt worn with the coat is of satin the same shade and plaited by machine.

This costume is very attractive for afternoon calling, and it makes a fine suggestion for between seasons wear. Later on, in place of the velvet coat, satin or silk could be used for the entire costume, with coat collar and cuffs of a contrusting fabric. Ratine or the new zigzag cloth would be an appropriate selection.

For the sixteen-year-old size the coat requires three and one-quarter yards of Culinary Newness.

Chocolate cream roll is a delicious bread that is little known by the average housewife. Here is a recipe that will appeal to the most fastidious taste: Beat three large eggs very light without separating the whites and yolks. It must not be forgotten, however, that to compel a child who is not hungry to take a large meal will only overtax the digestion and may be the cause of school dyspepsia. A tumbler ful of milk at bedtime is the best "supper" for the younger school children at least. After eleven or twelve years of age most school boys and girls will want bread and butter in addition for supper.

Like Darning.

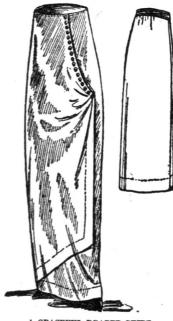

If you wish to embroider silk stockings try the following plan instead of using an embroidery boop: Place your darning ball inside the stocking and hold it as though you were going to darn, save that you should be very careful not to stretch the stocking. Simply hold it smooth over the darner where you are to do the embroidery.

Preparing Cocoanut.

When desiring to use fresh cocoanuts for a cake or dessert of any kind, instead of grating it in the old way, use the meat chopper. This may be done more quickly, and the cocoanut is light and fluffy. This is well worth trying, especially if you are pressed for time. Fingers are often bruised through using the grater.

THEY DARED FOR LOVE

WHAT MEN HAVE DONE FOR CHARMING WOMEN.

Since Mark Antony's Time There Have Been Myriads of Men Who Discarded Everything For the Ones They Adored - Sheridan Turned Coachman and William Pitt Drank Wine From Lady's Shoe.

That "love often makes a fool of the cleverest men" history furnishes abundant proofs, ever since (and long before) Mark Antony fell under the spell of Cleopatra's dark eyes and crowned a career of folly with suicide. Sheridan revelled in the role of hackney-coachman for the pleasure of driving his adored "Nightingale of Bath" to her home night after night and exchanging love-glances with her under the eyes of her unsuspecting father; and Canning put on groom's livery and did stable work in exchange for the delight of escorting as groom in attendance, his master's daughter on her daily rides.

William Pitt, most unsentimental of men, as he considered himself, was so intoxicated by the charms of a pretty maid of Devon that he drank her health in canary out of one of her dainty shoes; and Mr. Sellwood, a notable man of his day, actually served as lootman in the house of the ludy he loved for twenty long years, until her husband's death set her free to accompany him to the altar.

And so it has always been—from the German baron who had his right hand cut off, because it had accidentally struck the cheek of the woman whose little finger was more to him than his whole body, to the gilded young French nobleman, who served years of apprenticeship to the law and won fame as an advocate to prove to his lady-love that he was not the butterfly of pleasure she fancied.

There is no year that does not yield its crcp of similar stories of men who have proved that no sacrifice is too great to win a lady's favor. When the youthful Count Francis Erbach succumbed at sight of a peasant-girl whom he met one day when riding in the forest at Erbach, he determined that she and no other should be his wife, cost what it might. That Anna Echultz earned her daily bread at the wash-tub mattered nothing to this heir to great dignities and to estates valued at £200,000 a year. He defied his father's anger, fled with his peasant maid to London, and married her-a disinherited outcast.

"I do not for a moment regret the step I have taken," he said. "On the contrary, we are perfectly happy. I intend to work for my living, and I have L' ady taken steps to find empl_yment."

It was with the same proud spirit of self-sacrifice that Prince Eberwyn zu Bentheim-Steinfurt, cousin of the Queen of Holland, gave his hand a short time ago in the Strand Registry Office to Fraulein Langenfeld, the daughter of a tradesman who had be-gun life as a peasant. The German Emperor himself had in vain tried to dissuade him from such a "mad step." He turned a deaf ear to all the threats and entreaties of his family, and formally renounced the heir-ship to £250,000 a year to his younger brother Prince Victor. And when he had thus condemned himself to poverty and obscurity, he declared, "I need not say that I am more than

THEIR MOTHER TONGUE.

As It Was Spoken by the Englishman and the American.

An American in London, living in a private hotel, inquired of an English acquaintance how it was that every one in the house immediately recognized his nationality. In "Vagabond Journeys" Mr. Percival Pollard records the conversation.

The Englishman looked at our American friend for a moment and then ventured this definite explanation:

"Oh, of course, don't you see, they would know you, you see, like a shot. I mean to say, you see, that it's quite odds on, don't you see, that you are, that you are, you see! Eh?"

The American chewed on this a little and then remarked, apropos of nothily, and formally renounced the heirship to £250,000 a year to his younger brother Prince Victor. And when he had thus condemned himself to poverty and obscurity, he declared, "I need not say that I am more than happy. As long as I live, I shall rejoice that I had the firmness to place my happiness and that of my bride above the mediaeval prejudices of my house."

Whils Prince Eberwyn was thus gladly sacrificing rank and riches for love, Count Hans von Hochberg, heir to the Duchy of Rohnstock, was standing at an altar far from his native land with Fraulein Louise Carow, a German shop girl, for whose sake he had abandoned his claim to the family estate and dignities. "I am going to earn my living as a chauffeur." this young hero of romance said; "and I know that I shall be happier sharing a poor home with the woman I love than if I were Duke of Rohnstock with £100,000 a year but without her."

It is but a short time since the heir to a noble Italian house was lathering cheeks in the shop of a Clerkenwell barber, as the first-fruits of a similar adventure in matrimony. Son and heir to the Marquis di Castro, of Naples, he had turned his back on title and fortune at the bidding of Love in the form of a pretty young dressmaker whom he brought to London to wed.

Such romances of to-day could be multiplied almost indefinitely—from the love adventures of the Archduke of Leopold of Austria, nephew of the emperor, who was content to be a royal outcast for the sake of Fraulein Ritter, farmer's daughter and domestic servant, to the Prince de Brcglie, who, not long ago, was conducting an orchestra in a New York Theatre while the wife, for whom he sacrificed everything but happiness—the greatest thing of all—was singing on the stage.

That even crime is, at times, no barrier in the path of love we have had abundant evidence in very recent times; for we are familiar with the story of the French bank clerk who robbed his employers of £34,000 in order to provide a sumptuous nuptial home across the seas. His one wish, he declared, was "to embezzle enough money to get away to Buenos Ayres with Mme.—, and to ensure her the position which she deserved."

Liverpool's Chinatown.

Liverpool, England, boasts of quite an extensive Chinatown. In this quarter of the port are to be found numerous Chinese shops, sailors' boarding houses, several restaurants and a Chinese seamen's mission.

Only One Accepted.

"Father, did mother accept you the first time you proposed to her?"

"Yes, my dear, but since then any proposal that I have ever made she has scornfully rejected."

It isn't because the cigar is badly made that the wrapper sometimes comes uncurled. It is because the cigar is a left-handed one.

A nervous smoker, twisting and twirling his cigar, has no trouble with a right hand one, but if it happens te be a left hand ene it is apt to come undone. together—the language. Still, as I was saying. I can't make up my mind whether it's my feet or my language. I'd like to have a real heart to heart talk with you about some of these little details of the language that binds us together, tongues across the sea, as it were. Come and have lunch with me at the Cecil."

"Quite sorry! I just went and had a bone an hour ago."

"Beg pardon?"

"Ch, I mean to say, of course, don't you see, I had a grilled bone at the club."

"Well, there's another thing I'd like to talk to you about when you have time some day. That's the exact definition of the week end. I've noticed that when your lawyer or stockbroker, and so forth, says he's going away for the week end it means that he's leaving Thursday evening and not showing up again until Tuesday morning. There goes a boy from E-ton; I can tell him by his clothes."

"From where?"

"E-ton," repeated the Yankee. "Accents on the 'ton,' doesn't it?"

"No; don't you see, it's just Eton."

"Oh, rimes with 'meetin', eh, dropping the 'g' carefully at the same time as the voice and otherwise concealing the alphabet as much as possible? Well, well!" and the American pulled up his horse. "Ain't it great we speak the same language?"

THE EMPEROR'S STAR.

It Simply Had to Be Put on the Cross on the Church Spire.

Emperor William is the busiest man in Germany. He revises or approves all decisions in public matters, supervises all art and architecture and lectures everybody. In illustration of the deference paid to his wishes in even the smallest details, they tell in Berlin, writes Mr. Samuel G. Blythe in Everybody's Magazine, the story of the star above the cross on the spire of the Emperor William Memorial church.

Of course the kaiser insisted on revising the plans of the church. The architect brought the plans to him, and the kaiser scratched out what he did not like and made such additions as he fancied before he gave them the imperial O. K. The church was built There was to be a big gilt cross on the spire, and it appeared in its proper place. But, much to the general astonishment, when the cross was put up a large, many pointed star was raised above it on a heavy rod. The Berliners could not understand the star. They inquired. The architect said the kaiser had added the star to the plans.

The plans were examined. Then it was found that in revising them the kaiser had let fall a drop of ink from his pen, which hit the paper just above the cross. The architect studied a long time over this blot of ink. There could be no appeal, no inquiries. He finally decided that the blot of ink signified a star above the cross, and he put the star there, making it to correspond as nearly as possible with the outline of the blot. The star is still there.

The model is an excellent one for the coat suit, for the gown and for the odd skirt to be worn with separate waists and is well adapted to wash materials as well as to woolen stuffs.

For the medium size this skirt requires seven yards of material twentyseven inches wide when made of one material. The width of the skirt at the lower edge is two yards.

Little girls are wearing a great many dresses made with straight plaited skirts. This one also includes a pretty shaped collar and is closed at the left of the front. There are set in sleeves that can be finished above or below the elbows.

For the ten year size the dress will take four yards and a half of twentyseven inch goods, with five-eighths of contrasting fabric for the trimming.

sinp to £200,000 a year to his younger brother Prince Victor. And when he had thus condemned himself to poverty and obscurity, he declared, "I need not say that I am more than happy. As long as I live, I shall rejoice that I had the firmness to place my happiness and that of my bride above the mediaeval prejudices of my house."

While Prince Eberwyn was thus gladly sacrificing rank and riches for love, Count Hans von Hochberg, heir to the Duchy of Rohnstock, was standing at an altar far from his native land with Fraulein Louise Carow, a German shop girl, for whose sake he had abandoned his claim to the family estate and dignities. am going to earn my living as a chauffeur," this young hero of ro-mance said; "and I know that I shall be happier sharing a poor home with the woman I love than if I were Duke of Rohnstock with £100,000 a year but without her.

It is but a short time since the heir to a noble Italian house was lathering cheeks in the shop of a Clerkenwell barber, as the first-fruits of a similar adventure in matrimony. Son and heir to the Marquis di Castro, of Naples, he had turned his back on title and fortune at the bidding of Love in the form of a pretty young dressmaker whom he brought to London to wed.

Such romances of to-day could be multiplied almost indefinitely-from the love adventures of the Archduke of Leopold of Austria, nephew of the emperor, who was content to be a royal outcast for the sake of Fraulein Ritter, farmer's daughter and demestic servant, to the Prince de Breglie, who, not long ago, was con-ducting an orchestra in a New York Theatre while the wife, for whom he sacrificed everything but happiness—the greatest thing of all—was singing on the stage.

That even crime is, at times, no barrier in the path of love we have had abundant evidence in year re-had abundant evidence in very recent times; for we are familiar with the story of the French bank clerk who robbed his employers of £34,000 in order to provide a sumptuous nuptial home across the seas. His one wish, he declared, was "to embezzla enough money to get away to Buenos Ayres with Mme.—, and to ensure her the position which she deserved.'

Liverpool's Chinatown.

Liverpool, England, boasts of quite an extensive Chinatown. In this quarter of the port are to be found numerous Chinese shops, sailors' boarding houses, several restaurants and a Chinese seamen's mission.

"Father, did mother accept you the first time you proposed to her?

A nervous smoker, twisting and twirling his cigar, has no trouble with a right hand one, but if it happens to be a left hand one it is apt to come undone, whether it's my feet or my language. I'd like to have a real heart to heart talk with you about some of these little details of the language that binds us together, tongues across the sea, as it were. Come and have lunch with me at the Cecil."

"Quite sorry! I just went and had a bone an hour ago."

"Beg pardon?"

"Oh, I mean to say, of course, don't you see, I had a grilled bone at the club."

"Well, there's another thing I'd like to talk to you about when you have time some day. That's the exact definition of the week end. I've noticed that when your lawyer or stockbroker, and so forth, says he's going away for the week end it means that he's leaving Thursday evening and not showing up again until Tuesday morning. There goes a boy from E-ton; I can tell him by his clothes."

"From where?"

"E-ton," repeated the Yankee. "Accents on the 'ton,' doesn't it?" "No; don't you see, it's just Eton."

"Oh, rimes with 'meetin',' eh, dropping the 'g' carefully at the same time as the voice and otherwise concealing the alphabet as much as possible? Well, well!" and the American pulled up his horse. "Ain't it great we speak the same language?"

THE EMPEROR'S STAR.

It Simply Had to Be Put on the Cross on the Church Spire.

Emperor William is the busiest man in Germany. He revises or approves all decisions in public matters, supervises all art and architecture and lectures everybody. In illustration of the deference paid to his wishes in even the smallest details, they tell in Berlin, writes Mr. Samuel G. Blythe in Everybody's Magazine, the story of the star above the cross on the spire of the Emperor William Memorial church.

Of course the kaiser insisted on revising the plans of the church. The architect brought the plans to him, and the kaiser scratched out what he did not like and made such additions as he fancied before he gave them the imperial O. K. The church was built There was to be a big gilt cross on the spire, and it appeared in its proper place. But, much to the general astonishment, when the cross was put up a large, many pointed star was raised above it on a heavy rod. The Berliners could not understand the star. They inquired. The architect said the kalser had added the star to the plans.

The plans were examined. Then it was found that in revising them the kaiser had let fall a drop of ink from his pen, which hit the paper just above the cross. The architect studied a long time over this blot of ink. There could be no appeal, no inquiries. He finally decided that the blot of ink signified a star above the cross, and he put the star there, making it to correspond as nearly as possible with the outline of the blot. The star is still there.

Farmers, Take Notice!

The directors of the Lennox Agricultural Society decided at their last meeting to enter the standing field crop competition again this year. The grain to be any variety of oats, and five acres to be sown. Anyone wishing to compete can do so by be-coming a member of the society, which entitles them to all the previleges of the fair to be held on September 16th and 17th. Last year ten of our farmers entered this competition and $75.00 was paid in prizes. First prize was $20.00 and so on down to 6th, $4.00. Members winning a prize are elegible to compete at the Toronto Exhibition, if they wish, without extra fee. Mr. C. W. Neville received second prize on his oats last year at Toronto. The officers are desirous that a large number will enter this competition. Anyone wishing to do so may apply to Mr. M. N. Empey, President, or any of the directors, or the secretary, who will give all the information necessary. The grain will be judged when it is turning yellow by an expert sent by the Department of Agriculture at Toronto. A sheaf of the prize grain must be brought to the Napanee Fair and a prize will be awarded. Competitors may enter the sheaf competition also at Toronto.
